MAN ADMITS KILLING GIRL, 8

Shepard Gets Medical Tests

Doctors Find Good News In Reports

GRAND BAHAMA ISLAND (UPI)—Astronaut Alan B. Shepard rested today between medical examinations while the nation celebrated his performance in opening America's gate to manned space flight.

Doctors found welcome news in medical reports on Shepard. They said one big thing he proved was that weightlessness in space is a "non-spectacular event."

Shepard, here until tomorrow in a special hospital, was undergoing one of the most thorough medical examinations a man has ever received. But all indications were he ended his space trip Friday in tip-top shape.

Dr. William K. Douglas, Project Mercury flight surgeon, said that through about five minutes of weightlessness Shepard's reaction was "just what we expected from our experience with the trainer."

The astronaut's pulse went up slightly, but well within the expected limit, Douglas said. "That pulse certainly did not go up as far as mine would have," he added.

Officials Praise Performance
Shepard put the first big rung in America's ladder to the moon by rocketing up 115 miles at a top speed of 5,160 miles per hour. His Redstone rocket performed beautifully, project officials said.

The astronaut landed in the water safely after a flight of 15 minutes.

Shepard was to remain in a special hospital on this British-owned island over the weekend for intensive observation even though doctors said he apparently came through the 15-minute flight in perfect condition. He underwent psychological tests today to "probe his feelings and sensations."

Astronaut Talks To Wife On Telephone

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (UPI)—A high-flying jet drew a wispy "S" in the sky above the rambling brick home and the willowy brunette on the porch knew her husband's name would live forever in the annals of the brave.

Louise Shepard, the center of a whirlpool of yapping dogs, yelling reporters and laughing children, looked up with eyes not quite dry and said "this will go down in history."

She had just finished the most agonizing hours of her life—the hours when her husband Alan boarded a space capsule atop a mighty rocket in Florida and blasted into space. He came down 16 minutes later, safe and smiling, and Mrs. Shepard left the television set, wiped the tears from her eyes and went outside.

"I don't have to tell you how I feel. It's just wonderful... It's just wonderful... beautiful," she said over and over. Mrs. Shepard was so happy she could hardly contain herself, and joy abounded in this resort town.

Mayor Frank Dusch made the astronaut the honorary mayor of Virginia Beach and local radio stations began referring to the town as "the home of America's No. 1 astronaut."

Mrs. Shepard must wait until Monday to hear her husband tell her of his flight. He called her Friday night, but the connection was so bad he could only get across to her that he was happy, feeling fine, and had talked to the President.

He asked about their daughters Julianna, 10, and Laura, 13. Laura watched the flight on television in St. Louis, where she attends a boarding school.

Then he had to hang up. Mrs. Shepard will meet him at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington when he flies in Monday to see the President.

Mrs. Shepard is sure her husband wants to be the first American to make an orbital flight, but as for her own desires, well, "That's a hard question to answer."

Barton PTA Holds Sale

The Clara Barton PTA is holding its annual fair today at the school, Blue Ridge Drive, Levittown.

There will be cotton candy, hot dogs, popcorn among the edible items and toss rugs and other household goods. Lots of "Indians" will be on hand to live up the affair, a spokesman said. The affair will close at 5 p.m.

Buried With Full Army Honors

Body Of Soldier Comes Home, After 17 Years In Lost Grave

After lying in an unmarked grave on foreign soil for 17 years, the body of an American soldier, killed in battle, was finally safe at rest today in his own native land.

In special solemn ceremonies yesterday, the Army paid its final tribute to Sgt. Richard O. Matthiesen, as the remains of the long missing hero were interred with full military honors in the Beverly National Cemetery in Edgewater Park, N.J.

Sgt. Matthiesen, a member of Company E, 110th Infantry Regiment, 28th Infantry Division, was killed during an attack on a German pillbox near Oudler, Germany, in October, 1944. He was 20 years old at the time.

Because Matthiesen's body was never recovered following the ac-

Kennedy Asks Accelerated Space Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy plans to ask Congress to pay for an accelerated space program because the United States still "has a long way to go" despite astronaut Alan Shepard's historic flight.

The President, rejoicing over the success of the flight, plans to pay tribute to Shepard and the nation's six other astronauts Monday at a special White House ceremony.

But he warned at his news conference Friday that the United States was still behind Russia in space, but "we are going to increase our efforts." He did not say how much more money he would request.

It appeared that Congress would have little argument. The House Space Committee has already added $126.6 million to the $1.23 billion space budget Kennedy recommended.

Chairman Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said "Congress stands ready to fully support such a program."

The ceremony with Shepard will be broadcast live on radio and television Monday, probably about (Continued on Page 3, Col. 8)

Rebels Ignore Cease Fire

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI)—Communist-led Pathet Lao rebels, ignoring the cease fire in strife-torn Laos, struck hard today against government guerrillas operating behind rebel lines, Defense Minister Gen. Phoumi Nosavan announced.

The reported rebel attack against loyal Meo tribesmen caused speculation that the Pathet Lao may have interpreted the 72-hour-old cease fire as a front-line matter only, leaving them free to round up guerrillas behind their lines.

It came as officials in three countries sought to lay the foundations for peace in this Southeast Asian nation in a diplomatic drive spearheaded by cease fire negotiators in the jungle north of here. In New Delhi, Britain and Russia formally asked India to send in the three-nation control commission which is to verify a cease fire in Laos.

Body Pulled From Canal In Makefield

Intensive investigation by five police units from Pennsylvania and New Jersey and the FBI brought a quick confession last night in the suffocation slaying of eight-year-old Mary Helen Jablonski, whose body was found yesterday in the Delaware River Canal, Lower Makefield Township.

Allegedly confessing to the killing was Leonard J. Nawrockik, 28, of 152 Home Ave., Trenton, a neighbor of Mary Helen, who lived at 519 Beatty St.

Material Witness

Leonard's brother, Carl F. Nawrockik, 22, who found the body in the canal at 3:30 p.m. was held as a material witness.

MARY HELEN JABLONSKI

The victim had been missing since 8:30 Thursday night when she went outside the candy store operated by her parents to play.

According to Mercer County Prosecutor Stanley T. Rutkowski, Leonard admitted enticing the girl into a garage behind his house and killing her by holding his hand over her nose and mouth.

Rutkowski said that Leonard stated that after fondling her he decided he'd have to kill her.

Leonard then stated that "he put her body in the car and drove across the river and dropped her body into the canal."

Rutkowski announced the confession at 11 o'clock last night.

Arrested At 5 p.m.

Leonard had been arrested at his home at about 5 p.m. by Sgts. John McKeever and Leon Foley, both of the Trenton police.

Leonard is single and works as a warehouseman.

A Trenton policeman who guarded Leonard between 8 and 9 o'clock last night said the man slept sitting in a chair while awaiting questioning.

After Carl Nawrockik discovered the body yesterday, he went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Campbell on Black Rock Road, Lower Makefield Township, to telephone police.

Mrs. Campbell said that Carl was in a highly nervous state. He told her the body was probably that of the lost Trenton girl. He added that the murder had probably been committed in Trenton and the body dumped in the canal. He told Mrs. Campbell that the missing girl was his neighbor but said he did not know her.

Carl told police that he had come over to Lower Makefield to fish in the Black Rock section of the canal, where he found the body. Police termed his story "doubtful."

Lower Makefield police impounded his car.

Body Bruised
When pulled from the canal, the girl's body had an indentation of the head, bruises of the thigh, chest, back, lip and nose.

The body was found in the canal off Black Rock Road, near the Westover Cottage development.

Grease was found on the girl's hand and body. This led the police investigation to the garage, which is just around the corner from her home.

Doll Or What?
Carl said that when he first saw the body in the canal, he couldn't tell whether it was a "doll" or what.

Carl told police he works for an insurance firm and had the afternoon off and "just decided to go fishing for a couple of hours."

He said he was a Navy veteran and works for an insurance firm in Trenton.

It was reported that the two brothers both went to work yesterday.

Good Evening!

Derby Day It Is.

Louisville's Churchill Downs takes the play away from the space - shot triumph, for the nonce, and Alan Shepard defers to such names as Carry Back, Crozier and Ambipolise, for a few hours.

We've got to go with Carry Back, with Crozier big danger, and with Ambipolise a sleeper. Okay, by twilight time you'll see.

Nation still talking to itself about its highly significant space-triumph and well it might. We're on the way.

"Boy, what a ride," exclaimed the new national hero Astronaut as he emerged from his capsule and climbed aboard a hovering helicopter.

Maybe he's right. But was he ever in a hurry to get some place with our own Spence Erwin?

Tornadoes on the loose in Oklahoma and leave a wide swath of death and destruction.

Let 'em have Oklahoma. We'll take this little old Lower Bucks County in Pennsylvania where with rare exception kind, moderate skies bring us the kind of lovely-to-feel climatic we're enjoying right now.

And the weatherman says everything okay for the weekend.

Those poor Phillies. They just can't seem to get the right combination operating at the right time, as witness their defeat last night by the Giants, 4-2, for their fifth straight loss. But don't give up on 'em. They're going to start exploding.

Speaking of the Giants, they're on the way. In command of first place and the Pirates pressing and struggling and scrambling.

Look what's happening in the Las Vegas Tournament of Champions! Jay Hebert leading, old man Sneed only 2 strokes behind, and Palmer in a collapse. You never know.

Communique No. 5: Even our dogs are looking at us snidely as we watch 'em wolf down delicious beef and liver and are tempted by the leftovers. William Beymer never said it better when he counseled: "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow ye die."

Nice weekend for a long glimpse at Bucks County's spring beauty. But drive carefully, Right? Okay.

Go to church tomorrow.

Workers Sought For Beckert

Volunteers are being sought to help in the reelection of incumbent Bucks County District Attorney Paul R. Beckert, according to Alan D. Williams, chairman of the county Republican primary election campaign.

The workers will be asked to report to Republican County Committee headquarters, 50 East Court St., Doylestown, any week day between now and the May 16 election during the hours 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Going in Circles

Residents of the Goldenridge section of Levittown who happened to encounter two 11-year-olds, Jerry Saxon and Allen Russell from that section late one day this week, must have thought at first that the two were characters from a space movie.

But the simple explanation was that Jerry and Allen, outfitted in goggles and gloves, their clothing spattered with whitewash, had just spent the day giving trees along Goldenridge Drive a protective coating of lime.

The pair are fifth graders at the Emerson School and having a day off because of teacher's conference, decided to fix up the trees around their homes. When one neighbor after another spied the two at work, yep you guessed it — Jerry and Allen found that they were in popular demand.

The two eventually wound up with some spending money for their pains though.

Agenuous and gifted student at Council Rock High School believes in the adage that "one good turn deserves another."

She is Shirley Hinger, an 11th grade student who lives in Churchville.

Seems that Shirley and fellow student Lynne Duke came out even-even when it came to the school's awarding a Saturday Scholarship to the Moore Institute of Art in Philadelphia. The girls were equals on the basis of art ability, rank in class and in other test scores. But only one scholarship was figured in the budget.

A drawing of straws was held. Shirley won, Lynne lost.

But Shirley wanted to share her good luck and offered the split value of the scholarship with her friend. When the student council got wind of Shirley's offer, it came up with an offer to match the Moore scholarship after enlisting the help of various organizations.

So two girls will be able to enjoy the full benefits of art school instead of just one.

nauts will fly Monday to Washington to meet President Kennedy and tell the nation how it feels to rocket through space.

The Russian news agency Tass sniffed that Shepard's flight "cannot in any way be compared with the flight of the Soviet space ship Vostok" in which Yuri Gagarin made one orbit of the earth.

Shepard Controls Flight

But there was one major difference. The Russian space craft was controlled all the way from the ground. Shepard manipulated his bell-shaped spaceship, controlling its yaw, pitch, and roll with manual controls and acting as a test pilot.

Dr. Hugh L. Dryden, deputy director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), said Shepard's flight showed that "we are ready to go" with manned orbital flights—probably before the end of the year.

The Apollo spacecraft now taking shape on the drawing boards may put three men around the moon by 1967 and may land a man on the moon by 1968 or 1969.

Air Force Col. Robert S. Maloney, deputy commander of the Atlantic missile range, said the "anxious moments" in the blockhouse before the rocket blasted off were caused by low clouds, problems in a computer and in an electrical gadget in the rocket.

Blast Off Delayed

Shepard sweated out three hours and 27 minutes of his back in the coffin-tight capsule before the rocket blasted off, but his pulse rate did not quicken until the 78,000 pound thrust Redstone engine ignited.

Then his voice over the radio from "Freedom 7" space capsule could have been that of a laconic railroad dispatcher.

"This is Freedom Seven," he said as the follow roar of the rocket washed back from the sky over thousands gathered on Canaveral's sandy beach.

That was the sound of space. The capsule, under a red and white parachute, floated into the sea seven miles from the predestined target — right in the ballpark. Marine helicopters hovered around it as it drifted down.

Within five minutes after hitting the water, Shepard was in a helicopter and on his way to the deck of the aircraft carrier USS Lake Champlain.

Ticker Parade To Outdo Lindy's

NEW YORK (UPI) —New York City was ready and anxious today to give America's first astronaut, Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard Jr., the biggest ticker tape parade since Charles Lindbergh returned from Paris.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner said he will invite Shepard to be the city's guest for the traditional parade of heroes up lower Broadway, where tons of paper confetti are poured down from skyscraper windows.

The Department of Commerce and Public Events promised the parade would be "even bigger than the one for Charles Lindbergh" after his 1927 solo flight across the Atlantic.

Girl Killed

Company, Morrisville, manned the boat that pulled the girl from the water. The body was about four feet off the eastern canal shore, just below the surface, clearly visible.

Crowds lined the canal overpass during the search for the body.

Rescue units using searchlights continued probing until 3:10 a.m. today when they found the victim's clothes in the canal. Her clothes and yellow pedal pushers were recovered by the Yardley-Makefield Rescue Squad.

Levittown Relatives

Mary Helen was the niece of Mr. and Mrs. William Evans, 64 Elderberry Drive, Levittown, who said she was a shy child and was afraid of strangers. She was a third grade pupil in St. Stanislaus School, Trenton, and was to have been in the First Friday May procession yesterday.

An autopsy performed today by Dr. Frank F. Communi showed the girl died of suffocation and there was no evidence of sexual molestation.

An arraignment for Leonard was scheduled today at the First Police Precinct Station, Trenton.

Taking part in the investigation were Trenton, Lower Makefield, Morrisville, and Yardley police, Bucks County detectives and the FBI.

In addition to her parents, the victim is survived by a brother, Carl Jr., 10.

Judge Ill 12 Days You Can Still Enter Bar-B-Q King Test

As a result of an attack of the flu on Monte Proser, internationally known theatrical personality and restaurateur, entries in the LBA - Levittown Times King of the Bar-B-Q contest which will be held on the Mall of the Levittown Shop-A-Rama, Saturday, May 27 has been extended another week.

Proser who will go over the recipes submitted, with Odette Myrtil of Chez Odette in New Hope and Charles Colligan of Colligan's Stockton Inn, is just returning to his newest cafe, The Lanai, atop the Winter Garden on Broadway in New York City after having been laid up for 12 days with the flu.

Proser has requested a grill for himself and as he so quaintly put it to the

LBA: "We'll swing with the steaks on Saturday."

All potential Bar-B-Q kings, of which 12 will be selected from their recipes will all be presented with their outdoor grills, free of charge, as one of the prizes. The winners, in addition to other presents, will be guests early in June for dinner at the Chez Odette in New Hope as well as Colligan's in Stockton, N. J.

All food which will be entered in the contest must be ready at approximately 2 p.m. for judging. During the day, the Pepsi Cola Company is bringing in special equipment and dispensing units and will dispense free Pepsi Cola to spectators, chefs and shoppers alike.

Send all entries to King Of The Bar-B-Q, Courier-Times, Route 13, Levittown, Pa.

Strikes Pothole, Cyclist Hurt

Charles A. Knapf, 9980 Halde-man Ave., Bustleton, was injured last night when he lost control of the motorcycle he was riding on Taylor Road, Bensalem Township, according to police.

Police said Knapf struck a pothole in the road and then was upended as the cycle overturned. He suffered abrasions of the right cheek, hip and arm.

Members of the Bucks County Rescue Squad said Knapf was unconscious for five minutes while they were taking him to Lower Bucks County Hospital. The accident occurred at 9:35 p.m., police said.

Yardley Youth Gets Drug Term

Richard DiBenedetti, 19, of 33 Morningside Drive, Yardley, who was arrested by a state narcotics agent on April 17 as a user of heroin, yesterday was sentenced to 23 months in Bucks County prison for violation of parole.

DiBenedetti, a hairdresser, pleaded guilty to use of heroin and possessing dangerous drugs. He told Judge Lawrence A. Monroe he was accustomed to five heroin "fixes" a day. Last July DiBenedetti was placed on 23 months probation on a similar charge.

Judge Monroe said he will permit the user to apply for admission to the Federal Hospital for narcotics users in Lexington, Ky., and allow him to go there for treatment if he is accepted before completing the 23-month sentence. The Judge said he will decide whether DiBenedetti must serve this full sentence after his release from Lexington.

Jewelry, Cookware, Nose Cone Unstained Handbag Contents Prove Versatility Of Steel

By KATHY FINEGAN Courier-Times Staff Writer

The contents of a woman's handbag are always a source of amusement to the supposedly uncluttered male, but even the most cynical observer would be delighted with the assorted objects that Gloria Wright carries in her purse.

A representative for the stainless steel industry, Miss Wright stopped at the Courier-Times office Thursday during her first visit to this area in preparation for the Steelmark Days promotion slated for June 1, 2, and 3. All Lower Bucks County retail stores will participate in the event.

The attractive, blue-eyed blonde produced an amazing assortment of feminine and unfeminine paraphernalia. Her favorite, and the biggest surprise of the visit, was a miniature copy of the stainless steel nose cone used on the Explorer, the first American satellite in space.

Four Pound Pot

Another was the first stainless steel cooking utensil ever produced. Made in New York City, it's 32 years old, weighs four pounds, and cost $8,000 to develop. Miss Wright also carried in her bag a stainless steel saucepan which had survived a house fire. Half of the pan was still black from the flames but the other half had been repolished and looked good as new.

Miss Wright's jewelry—a necklace and earring combination and a bracelet—was attractive, practical, and all stainless. "The greatest thing about this," she said, "is that it's non-toxic. Women who can't wear silver or gold because of allergies, can wear stainless. There's absolutely no chemical reaction."

Steelmark Days

Miss Wright, a native New Yorker, was "very eager to see the new Levittown," and anxious to compare it with Levittown, N.Y. She'll be one of several steel celebrities who will appear at the three-day celebration in Lower Bucks in June. "Steelmark Days" are the nicest part of my job," she said with enthusiasm. "It's like a big carnival."

Her favorite part of the program is the ping pong drop. A helicopter will drop hundreds of ping pong balls and one of them will entitle the finder to a prize.

"The little boys always carry huge baskets and bags, trying to catch as many of the balls as possible. It's one of the funniest things I've ever seen," she said.

Amazed At Stainless

Miss Wright, who has been associated with the Committee of Stainless Steel Producers, American Iron and Steel Institute, New York, for five years, said that she is "constantly amazed at the wonderful things they're doing with stainless steel."

She re-packed her handbag and started for her next destination, Pennsylvania Inn, where she was a guest of the Levittown Exchange Club at its regular luncheon meeting.

rests — in honored glory among his comrades.

The impressive ceremonies at the grave were witnessed by the sergeant's parents, his brother, William C. G. Matthiessen, also a combat veteran of the European invasion, and a small group of relatives and close family friends.

The Rev. George M. Rynick, 3rd., assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Levittown, delivered the graveside oration.

As the services ended, the American flag covering the sergeant's casket was correctly folded by two non-commissioned officers and gently placed in the hands of Sgt. Matthiessen's mother by Sgt. William C. Elmendorf, Second U.S. Army Escort Detachment, Dover AFB, Delaware.
